Hello and welcome to the new site of Peter Shuttleworth, a Computing graduate and IT Professional from the North West. The aim of this website is to provide detailed information for potential employers and to reflect the level of professionalism, skill and IT knowledge I have acquired over the years. My academic history, work background and skills are covered in the Curriculum Vitae section.

I also feel that the site goes some way to show my keen eye for web development and design as well as providing a workspace for me on the internet. I intend to display some of my photography and other work here as well as some of my interests. However, I wish to stress that this is not a Blog site as these are often too personal and uncomfortable to read. The photo above illustrates Buttermere in the Lake District on a very still and warm January day.
