

Audio

Contributed by Administrator
Thursday, 01 May 2008
Last Updated Friday, 02 May 2008

I have an interest in traditional two channel high end home Hi-Fi and have purchased a few generations of separates. I prefer the "British" sound as I think it is smoother and warmer than the harsher tones from overseas. That does not mean to say that the likes of Marantz do not produce a good sound. Far from it in fact, it is simply personal preference. Recent years have seen the major introduction of high end multi channel audio for use in Home Theatre setups. These do indeed produce a fantastic movie experience, especially when combined with a large Plasma or LCD television. However, for music these systems are almost universally lacking for music and that is why I am happy to see that the niche audio manufacturers are still investing time and effort into two channel equipment.

- NAD C370 Amplifier
- NAD 216 THX Power Amplifier
- Epos M12.2 Speakers on Mission Stance stands
- Rega Planet 2000 CD Player
- Pure DRX-701ES DAB/FM Tuner
- Rega Couple Interconnects
- QED Silver Anniversary speaker cable